a) That the applicant Baldwin Anyiga be granted order of Mandamus directed to the Respondent to restore, implement and safeguard his rights therein that is in his house number MG425/16 situated at Government quarters jogoo road Nairobi.

b) That the applicant who is a civil servant in the office of the President (Regional Administration and Internal Security) received an order from the 1st Respondent demanding that he vacate his house MG425/16 (Situated at Jogoo Road Government quarters) within or be forcefully evicted.

- 10) That the same was declined as it was deemed unprocedural as per Human Resource Policies and Procedures Manual for the Public Service, 2016.*

5. In support of the application Mr. Ndizo for the applicant submitted that the decision/order directed to the applicant in the back dated notice of 14th March, 2016 was harsh, cruel and condemned the applicant without hearing. There was no explanation given why the 1st and 2nd respondent failed to give the applicant a fair hearing before condemning him in case he was on the wrong.

6. Counsel further submitted that the decision to by the 1st and 2nd respondent to allocate an occupied and duly rented to a so called bonafide discerning civil servant was an abuse of the powers donated to the respondent by the Government. Mr. Ndiso further argued that the decision to allocate an occupied and rented house to the respondent's kin was a sign of bias against the claimant. According to Counsel, no prima facie case had been shown by the respondent to demonstrate before the court that swapping of houses between civil servants was outlawed or violated public interest and Government policy concerning the houses.

7. Mr. Kioko for the respondent submitted that Judicial Review was Concerned with the decision making process and illegality or otherwise of the decision rather than the metis thereof. The support he relied on the case of Municipal Council of Mombasa -vs- Republic and Umoja Consultants Limited Civil Appeal No. 185 of 2001. According to Counsel the ex-parte applicant was not entitled to any of the reliefs sought for the reason that the intended eviction and re-allocation of the Government unit was with the confines of the law. He submitted that the applicant was duly requested through a letter dated 14th March, 2017 to vacate the Government Unit MG 425 for reallocation to other discerning officers but unfortunately for reasons known to the applicant he failed or ignored the request and as such the hands were tainted contrary to the legal maxim that the who comes to equity must come with clean hands.

8. The respondent has a policy of allocating houses to diserving civil servants. It was not in dispute that the applicant herein had a house allocated to him to wit house number LG 996/34. He however entered into a local arrangement with one Eve Adeke Evagata to swap his house with hers. This was notified to the Respondent though a letter dated 22nd December, 2016 and received by the respondent on 3rd January, 2017. The reason for the two swapping house was given as financial constrain and family size. The claimant continued to pay rent to the respondent until 14th March 2017 when the respondent attempted to evict the claimant. This was thwarted by the claimant's neighbours and he was subsequently issued with a seven day's notice to vacate the premises. In the notice to vacate the respondent stated it had come to their attention that the applicant was occupying the house irregularly. This was in collusion with the allottee who vacated the same house. This implied the respondent received the applicant's notice of swapping houses dated 22nd December, 2016. There was nothing on record to show the respondent's disapproval of the arrangement between Ms. Eve Adeke and the applicant.

9. The Respondent reacted by attempting to evict him the applicant and thereafter issuing him a seven days' notice to vacate. The applicant was already an allottee of a Government house and the only reason the respondent wanted to evict from the house he occupied was because he swapped houses with another valid allottee allegedly contrary to the respondents Human Resource Policies and Procedures Manual. According to the respondent it was a standard practice for Government employees to officially request for the houses through filing of prescribed house application form provided by the Ministry. Upon vacation an officer surrenders the unit he or she was occupying in vacant possession for inspection and clearance. This procedure seems to provide only for cases of a person seeking allotment of a Government house and procedure when one vacates a house. It is silent on swapping houses between existing allottees.

10. To invoke the above procedure to justify dealing with the applicant's case therefore seems unreasonable. The infraction if any by the applicant could have been dealt with by respondent to his request dated 22nd December, 2016 by either declining or approving the same. In any event swapping of houses did not cause or interfere with the respondent's responsibility of allocating houses to discerning civil servants since there was no vacant house to allocate when the two civil servants swapped houses. Furthermore, even if the house vacated by the applicant was not occupied by Eve Adeke, the Respondent could still inspect the same and allocate it to another discerning civil servant.

11. In conclusion the court is persuaded that the applicant deserves the orders sought and hereby grants an order of certiorari to bring into this court the decision of the County Director of Housing, Nairobi issued on 14th March, 2017 for purposes of being quashed and the same is hereby quashed.

12. The applicant shall have costs of the suit.

13. It is so ordered.
